EVENING PAPER BEST

Largest Advertiser of New York Gives His Opinion.

Evening Paper Reaches the People—Laborer, Mechanic and Clerk Take Evenings for Reading.

Mr. Philip A. Conne, the advertising manager of the Siegel-Cooper Company, the great department store of New York, said in reply to a question as to whether the morning or evening paper was the better medium:

"You ask me which I consider the most valuable as an advertising medium—the evening paper or the morning newspaper. I will say that a great deal depends on whether the advertiser is catering to the popular trade or to what is generally designated as 'the classes.' If the advertiser's trade is with the wealthier class, then I should say that the morning newspaper is quite as good as the evening paper. On the other hand, if the advertiser desires to secure the trade of the laborer, the mechanic, the clerk, etc., who has hardly time to read even the most important news on his way to work in the morning, to say nothing of reading advertisements, and who seldom finds time to do any more reading of that nature until he returns home in the evening. I should most emphatically declare the evening paper to be the best advertising medium. In the evening the mechanic or clerk has ample time, as a rule, to read his evening paper, and to discuss with his wife any interesting news, attractive offers or advertisements he may find in its columns, and to come to a definite conclusion as to just where to buy. The experience of a great many years confirms this belief, and in our business we are now confining ourselves almost exclusively to the use of evening papers, with most gratifying results.
I am prepared to make the unqualified statement that any business house doing business on a strictly cash basis and catering to the popular trade, should confine its advertising to the evening papers, wherever it can do so."

A DEVICE FOR DOORS.
Afflicted Summer Boarders and Others
Find It Handy in Hot Weather.

Is there a woman that in boarding house or summer hotel, in the hottest of the "dog days," has not groaned in secret and openly over the heat of her room during the long afternoons, when in negligence she has wanted a nap or a dolce far niente over the latest novel?
To insure privacy the door must be kept closed, and then ventilation, even when there happened to be a transom, was very nearly impossible. With the door open a certain blowing to and fro in the breeze was all but useless.

No remedy for this evil has ever been suggested. Afflicted summer boarders have had to endure, and afternoon lounging on deshabille on hot afternoons has been dreaded.

But now, as the New York Herald tells, there has been planned a simple device that will make rooms habitable.
It is known as the "hook and eye," and in the country houses where it has been tried works like a charm. It consists of a thin iron bar, a foot to a foot and a half in length, with a hook on one end. This bar is attached to a ring, which in its turn is fastened to a screw plate. On arriving at her hotel or boarding house the guest has this screw plate fastened to the jamb of the door of her room.

There is the "hook." The "eye" is a simple ring of iron, also on a screw plate. This latter is screwed on the outside of the door, at any point desired, but at such a place that the hook being slipped into the eye the door will be held firmly opened for the space of a foot or so. The bar can be made longer if wanted, its exact length being quite immaterial. It is essential, however, that "hook" and "eye" be screwed in place five to six feet from the floor.

From this bar a thin curtain is hung, a filmy, thin curtain, just wide enough to cover the opening, that passersby along the halls may not see into the room. That this curtain may not wave hither and thither with the breeze it is made with a hem into which a weight is poured—and if the house be at the seashore, rocks and stones if it be in the country.

When the apparatus is in place and the curtain gently swings from the bar, a good breeze is coming in over the top that completely ventilates the room and brings down the temperature most effectually. At the same time there is the most absolute privacy.
